Living Water

Lawn & Tree Care

June 2020

Hi Friends & Neighbors,

Sometimes I get pretty philosophical in these newsletters. This one, in response to Covid, I am not gonna do that this time...at least not much. Instead let's JUST talk about lawns a bit.

May was really wet and cold, then right at the very end, it got hot. Now it's time for us to water! It's also almost certain that we will deal with some drought stress in turf and with the temporary fungus that comes every spring/ early summer. Because of this big weather swing, it may be worse than usual. Melt Out fungus happens during this time of year when the weather and temps are unstable. Melt Out causes turf to turn straw-colored in patches. Often drought stress starts this fungus cycle. The weird thing is that OVER watering actually makes the fungus worse. People understandably see the yellow turf, think it's dry, and pour water onto it.

Water and humidity cause the fungus to spread.
Sometimes mow wheel marks show up as yellow lines as the fungus spreads as well. Why? Well the mycelium that causes this fungus can spread on wheels or feet from grass plant to grass plant.
Mycelium is a big word for a micro-organism. We all know WAY too much about those things these days.
The good news is that while Melt Out looks horrible, it is temporary. When/If you get it, DON'T overwater. When temperatures are in the 70s, water every other day. When it's high 70s to mid 80s, water 5+ times a week. When high 80s to mid 90s, water 6+ times a week. When we hit the 100s, you may need to water 2 times a day. Your soil type and shade can cause some variation, but this is a good basic guideline.

If turf is dry and crunchy or becomes soggy, you will need to make an adjustment. If you see Melt Out on your lawn, you'll actually want to let your lawn dry out for 2 days and then follow the watering guidelines on the front.

Mowing higher SAVES water and discourages weeds. June - mid-September, mow 2 inches or higher. Once your turf adjusts to that height, it will look just as manicured and be FAR healthier. Turf that is healthy and dense is such an environmental plus, especially in urban and suburban settings. Healthy turf filters water going to our Aquifer, creates oxygen, and reduces our carbon footprint big time. It also looks COOL! Healthy trees and turf are good for everyone. So good job out there. :)

Finally, I have come to the conclusion that no one really knows what to do about Covid. There are lots of opinions and plenty of policy, but honestly no one knows. I do remember one thing. The apostle Paul gave some incredible advice that can't miss. "Be kind to each other. Have tender hearts toward each other. Forgive each other just as God for the sake of Jesus (His Son) forgives us." Ephesians 4:32. Love, Love, Love, be KIND, and Love.

Until next time,
God's richest blessings!
Mike
